CONNECTICUT'S ORGANIC LAW

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVEN-

TION TO MEET THIS WEEK. Long-Delayed Attempt to Modernize the Fundamental Law of the State—Disposition to Make as Few Change

as Possible-Politicians Shut Out. HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 29.-What will be accomplished by the Constitutional Convention which meets at the Capitol in this city at noon on Wednesday is a matter of some doubt. If former State Senator George M. Clark of Haddam, who is one of the delegates, can have his way, nothing will be done. Some time ago he prepared and distributed a circular showing the excellence of the present Constitution and the lack of need of a new one.

Mr. Clark has called a meeting for 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, before the assembling of the convention, of those delegates who agree with him, and it is his intention to prevent the adoption or preparation of a new Constitution. He will endeavor to have the convention adjourn immediately after coming together, without considering the matter for which it was called. There is no thought that Senator Clark has a following large enough to call for serious consideration, although the do-nothing policy is not without its advocates, among them being former Gov.

Morgan G. Bulkeley, who has been the most strenuous opponent of providing a new organic law for the State. The general impression now is that the convention will get down to serious work at once. Some predict that the sessions will last for two or three months, while others think what is to be done will be done in six weeks, or thereabouts. These latter advocate the taking of the present Constitution as a basis and the making of only such changes as seem necessary in the matter of town representation in the General Assembly, the defect in the present Constitution, which was the real cause of the convention's being called. It is believed that if some agreement among the delegates can be reached on this point, as to which there has long been a great diversity of opinion in the State, the convention will not waste much time over the other parts of the document, but will incorporate in it most of the features of the present Constitution, which is to most Connecticut people a venerated institution. Even many of those who urge a change in the method of representation regard the State Constitution as an admirable instrument in other of representation regard the State Constitution as an admirable instrument in other respects, and there is a widespread disposition to change it as little as possible.

One thing in the general uncertainty seems fairly certain. The convertion will provide no plums for the politicians, no provender from the State Treasury for the hungry. There had sprung up quite an active canvass for cierk and assistant clerk of the body, it being presumed that at least these two berths would be provided. It was then called to mind that the convention of 1818, when the present Constitution was made, elected one of its members clerk and that no offices were created for the politicians. Many of the leading delegates to the new convention have expressed themselves in favor of following this example. There will probably not even be a paid chaplain. One or more ministers have been seeking the appointment, but other views seem likely to prevail. As one delegate expressed it, a hired chaplain would keep his eyes directed toward the State Treasury rather than toward the throne of grace. It is proposed to invite the ministers of Hartford to take turns at the daily prayer in and for the conventions and if they are not willing to ask Divine blessings upon the convention, and if they are not willing to ask Divine blessings upon the convention, and if they are not willing to ask Divine blessings upon the convention, and if they are not willing to ask Divine blessings upon the convention, and if they are not willing to ask Divine blessings upon the convention, and if they are not willing to ask Divine blessings upon the convention, and if they are not willing to ask Divine blessings upon the convention, and if they are not willing to ask Divine blessings upon the convention, and if they are not willing to ask Divine blessings upon the convention, and if they are not will make the ministers of the good to the provided to the will be invited to do the praying. Economy and work are to be the watchwords, and it is the wish of many leading delega dcubtedly be admitted if he is sent by Granby.

The convention is largely Republican, if the politics of the members are taken as the test, although in a number of towns. Democrats and Republicans united on the candidates. The roll of delegates prepared by the Secretary of the State shows that there are 122 Republicans, 44 Democrats and 2 Prohibitionists. It shows that 34 of the delegates are lawyers, 54 farmers, 2 clergymen, and the rest are claimed by many businesses and professions. There are two editors, Charles Hopkins Clark of the Hartford Courant and Norris G. Osborn of the New Haven Register. The roll carries the names of many of the State's best known citizens. Charles M. Jarvis, who was President of the Berlin Iron Bridge Company until that concern was taken over by the bridge combine, will represent the Twentysix candidates are trying for places and a freshman team has been organized since the university determined to build a rink of its own on South Field. The 'Varsity's team work as yet is ragged and lacks snap, but after the men have found themselves at home on the ice again there is no reason why they should not pull together and develop as strong a team as represented Columbia last year. The men who have been taken to the 'Varsity table are: Capt. A. M. Wolff. '03. science; A. J. Akin, '04. college; D. A. Holmes, '04. science; F. M. Benedict, '04. science; C. W. wrestler in the business. Van Horn principally aims his defi at George Bothner.

"Rube" Ferns, the former welterweight puglistic champion, made his debut as a wrestler the other night at Buffalo. His opponent was "Farmer" Davis, who has a good reputation on the mat. Davis undertook to throw the puglist within "freen minutes at catch-as-catch-can style. The "Farmer" hauled and tugged away at Ferns but the latter was very strong and at the end of the bout was still undefeated. Ferns says that he is going to try and test his skill against either Harvey Parker or George Bothner.

Jim Parr, the English catch-as-catch-can champion, who recently arrived in this country, has gone to Hamilton, Ont, where he secured an engagement meeting all comers. Parr received a rousing reception on his first appearance. He met several good men and threw them quickly. Lew Whistler of San Francisco, who is said to be a nephe of Clarence Whistler, the old-time wrestler, has also arrived at Hamilton. Whistler, who welghs 175 pounds, has challenged the Englishman. Parr says that he will take on Whistler catch-as-catch-can style, best two out of three falls, provided the latter can muster a side bet of $500. This Whistler says he will do.

A few days ago John Piening, the "Butcher Rov," issued a challenge to meet Tom Jenkins.

There are 168 delegates in the convention, one from each of the towns of the State, irrespective of population. One vacancy has occurred, in the death of the Hon William C. Case of Granby, who was a leading lawyer of this city for many years. The Granby Republicans nominated the Hon. T. M. Maltbie on Friday night to fill the vacancy, and the election will be held to-morrow. It is understood that the Democrats of the town will not oppose his election. The act creating the convention made no provision for the filling of vacancies, but as the convention will be the judge of the qualifications of its own members, Mr. Maltbie will undeubtedly be admitted if he is sent by Granby.

The convention is largely Republican, if the politics of the members are taken as the test, although in a number of towns, Democrats and Republicans united on the candidates. The roll of delegates prepared by the Secretary of the State shows that there are 122 Republicans, 44 Democrats and 2 Prohibitionists.
